Residents Urged to Prioritize Public Safety Amid Armed Terrorist Threats

ARMED terrorists have been launching attacks by using residential homes and administrative buildings in towns and villages as cover, where they have forcibly settled. They aim to shield themselves from Tatmadaw counterattacks while also persuading temporarily displaced persons to return to their native areas and recruiting new members. That enables terrorists to use civilians as human shields. Tatmadaw is committed to safeguarding the sovereignty of the State and will respond to these threats based on intelligence and prevailing conditions. Therefore, residents in areas where terrorists have taken control must prioritize their safety and protect themselves from being exploited by these groups.

Yangon palm oil reference prices dip

THE wholesale reference rate of palm oil set for the Yangon market was poised for a decrease to K6,620 per viss for a week ending 18 May from K6,700 per viss in the previous week (5-11 May), according to the Supervisory Committee on Edible Oil Import and Distribution. The Supervisory Committee on Edible Oil Import and Distribution under the Ministry of Commerce has been closely observing the FOB prices in Malaysia and Indonesia, adding transport costs, tariffs and banking services to decide the wholesale market reference rate for edible oil weekly. Despite the reference price, the market price is way too high. To control overcharging, the Consumer Affairs Department under the Ministry of Commerce informed consumers of lodging complaints for overcharging through the call centre hotline in late August. The department urges consumers not to buy palm oil at high prices.

A vendor seen organizing cooking oil for sale in the market.

The Committee notified that any person who is involved in price gouging and oil storage to attempt market manipulation will face legal action under the Essential Goods and Services Law. The department is working together with the Myanmar Oil Dealers' Association and the cooking oil importing companies to offer affordable rates of imported palm oil for consumers. The complaints for overcharging can be lodged over hotline

1535 of the call centre of the Consumers Affairs Department, or sent to the Facebook page of the department and the region and state departments concerned. The domestic consumption of palm oil is estimated at one million tonnes per year. The local palm oil production is just about 400,000 tonnes. About 700,000 tonnes of palm oil are yearly imported through Malaysia and Indonesia to meet domestic demands. — NN/KK

Build safety families to be free from traffic dangers

THE UN General Assembly mandated the WHO and UN regional commissions to organize periodic UN Global Road Safety Weeks as platforms for global, regional, and especially national and local activities to raise awareness of road safety issues and promote appropriate responses.

The theme for the 8th UN Global Road Safety Week, taking place during the period from 12 to 18 May 2025, is “Streets for Life: Make Walking and Cycling Safe”. Such a theme highlights the importance of creating safe and accessible streets, especially for pedestrians and cyclists, who are disproportionately affected by road traffic injuries.

When walking and cycling are safe, these modes of transport promote health, contribute to sustainable cities, and support more equitable societies.

In Myanmar, the government has established the National Road Safety Council (NRSC) to oversee road safety initiatives across regions and states, including the Nay Pyi Taw Council Area, with the aim of reducing traffic accidents, vehicle damage, and casualties. Meanwhile, law enforcement bodies such as the traffic police, in cooperation with local authorities, work to prevent traffic congestion and accidents. Local authorities also raise public awareness about traffic regulations by delivering lectures on key traffic rules to students in basic education schools, distributing pamphlets, and installing billboards in major cities.

Local authorities also raise public awareness about traffic regulations by delivering lectures on key traffic rules to students in basic education schools, distributing pamphlets, and installing billboards in major cities.

Indeed, the human body is one of the most valuable assets throughout a person's life. No one wants to suffer injuries in a traffic accident, as the loss of life or physical harm cannot always be fully repaired. Therefore, it is essential for everyone to follow traffic laws and regulations carefully to avoid the dangers of potential accidents. By doing so, not only all road users, including drivers, pedestrians, cyclists and so on, but also their families at residences will have a better chance of leading safe and secure lives in the traffic safety society and avoiding regrettable accidents in advance.

Grassroots Actions and National Solutions for a Safer Future

By Yin Nwe Ko

MYANMAR is facing a dire public health crisis, with one of the shortest life expectancies among the ten ASEAN nations. This alarming situation stems from a combination of unsafe food practices, unhealthy dietary and lifestyle habits, weak regulatory oversight, and socioeconomic challenges like poverty and lack of awareness. The consequences are devastating, with a surge in chronic diseases, cancers, and autoimmune disorders, all of which are cutting lives short.

Some neighbouring countries exploit Myanmar as a dumping ground for substandard goods, flooding the market with dangerous products while lax regulations fail to protect consumers. To address this crisis, individual, community, and national-level changes are urgently needed, starting with safer food choices and healthier lifestyles.

One of the most pressing issues is the widespread adulteration of food products. Many imported goods, such as biscuits, arrive in Myanmar close to their expiration dates. Rather than being discarded, these products are repackaged with new labels and falsified date codes, deceiving consumers about their freshness and safety. This practice, common in the printing and packaging industry, prioritizes profit over public health, exposing people to potentially harmful substances.

Similarly, seafood like salmon, shishamo, freshwater prawns, and mackerel enter the country through informal border channels, primarily from Thailand's underground trade routes. These goods bypass any meaningful inspection by Myanmar's Food and Drug Administration (FDA), slipping into markets unchecked. For example, the Central Model Fish Market receives daily shipments from Thailand, with no regulatory barriers to ensure safety or quality.

The problem extends beyond expired goods to outright counterfeit and substandard products. Fake foods, beverages, and medicines are rampant, often produced in neighbouring countries where stricter regulations prevent their sale domestically. In Myanmar, however, these items find a ready market. Artificial sweeteners, costing as little as K200 for a handful, are widely used in cooking, contributing to a rise in diabetes, hypertension, and heart disease. These sweeteners, along with other chemical additives, are so pervasive that they've altered taste preferences, making it difficult for people to enjoy food without their intense sweetness. Reports of synthetic meat, eggs, and even plastic-like substances in products highlight the extent of this crisis. One shocking incident involved goat jerky that, when microwaved, melted into a plastic-like material, revealing the dangerous lengths to which some producers go to cut costs.

Agricultural practices further exacerbate the problem. Fruits and vegetables are treated with chemicals to accelerate growth, flowering, and ripening, allowing vendors to meet market demands for quick turnaround. For instance, tomatoes are often purchased green at wholesale markets and chemically ripened just before sale, ensuring they appear fresh. These substances, largely unregulated, pose significant health risks when consumed over time. Similarly, nearly all cooking oils available in Myanmar's markets — estimated at 99 per cent — consist of palm oil or reprocessed, low-quality oils imported from China. These oils, often recycled or chemically altered, are linked to cardiovascular issues and other chronic conditions. The lack of access to fresh, unadulterated oils forces many households to rely on these harmful alternatives, further endangering public health.

The FDA's inability to regulate effectively compounds these issues. At border checkpoints, inspections are minimal due to outdated equipment and limited expertise in detecting modern chemical additives. Even when harmful substances are identified, enforcement is weak, and violators face little consequence. The FDA frequently issues warnings about toxins in well-known food and beverage brands, yet these products remain widely available. The agency's struggles reflect broader systemic issues, including underfunding and a lack of political will to prioritize food safety. As a result, Myanmar remains vulnerable to a flood of dangerous goods, with little protection for consumers.

Lifestyle habits in Myanmar also play a significant role in the health crisis. Approximately 70 per cent of men consume alcohol, often opting for cheap liquor costing just K400 per bottle. Paired with inexpensive snacks like roasted peanuts (K100), these habits lead to rapid intoxication and long-term health damage. Similarly, betel quid use is widespread, with a comparable percentage of the population chewing it daily. The quid, often laced with harmful chemicals imported from of these practices are dire. Myanmar is witnessing a surge in non-communicable diseases, including diabetes, hypertension, heart disease, and kidney failure, driven by artificial sweeteners, alcohol, and chemical-laden foods. Cancer rates are soaring, with rare and aggressive types becoming more common. Cases include melanoma in teenagers, anaplastic non-Hodgkin's lymphoma in the knee, pancreatic cancer, and advanced liver and lung cancers, often diagnosed at stage 4. Autoimmune disorders are also on the rise, affecting multiple body systems and linked to dietary toxins and poor gut health. Even Burmese communities abroad are not immune, as many continue to consume imported Myanmar foods like fried fish paste, dried fish, pickled tea leaves, and fermented dishes, which carry the same risks.

Socioeconomic and systemic factors underpin this crisis. Poverty drives reliance on cheap, harmful products, while ignorance about food safety and health perpetuates risky behaviours. Greed fuels the production and sale of counterfeit goods, with unscrupulous businesses exploiting Myanmar's lax regulations. Neighbouring countries like Thailand, India, and China treat Myanmar as a dumping ground for substandard goods banned in their own markets, capitalizing on its weak enforcement. The government's failure to prioritize food safety, coupled with inadequate FDA resources, leaves the population vulnerable. Cultural attachment to traditional foods and habits, combined with a lack of awareness about healthier alternatives, further entrenches the problem.

To reverse this crisis, change must begin at the individual and family level. People should grow their own fruits and vegetables to ensure they are free of harmful chemicals. When buying produce, they should seek out local farmers selling naturally grown, pest-damaged goods or pick fresh fruits directly from trees. Fresh meat and fish should replace processed or preserved items, and sugary drinks, artificial sweeteners, excessive salt, spices, and oil should be avoided.

Households can opt for freshly pressed oils from trusted sources, such as local mills, or reduce oil use altogether. Healthier habits include drinking water or fresh juice in the morning to support gut health, eating rice-free dinners before 5 pm, brushing teeth after meals to prevent dental decay, and exercising regularly during brisk walking or climbing. Alcohol, tobacco, betel quid, and drugs must be eliminated entirely to reduce disease risk.

At the community and national level, broader action is essential. Raising awareness through schools, media, and local leaders can educate people about food safety and healthy lifestyles. The government must invest in modern FDA equipment, train staff, and enforce strict border inspections to block harmful goods. Promoting organic farming and incentivizing natural produce can shift reliance away from chemically treated products. Culturally, Myanmar must adopt dietary habits closer to those of longer-living nations, emphasizing vegetables, lean proteins, and minimal processed foods. Public health campaigns can encourage earlier bedtimes, regular exercise, and proper meal timing to align with global best practices.

The health crisis in Myanmar, rooted in unsafe food practices, harmful lifestyle choices, and systemic failures, demands urgent action. The alarming rise in chronic diseases, cancers, and autoimmune disorders underscores the need for change. By starting with individual and family-level actions — such as growing safe food, choosing natural products, and adopting healthier habits — Myanmar can begin to reverse this trend. Scaling these efforts to communities and the national level through education, stricter regulations, and cultural shifts is critical for building a healthier, longer-living population. Health is wealth, and it begins with informed choices, vigilance, and collective effort to protect the nation's future.

Heart rhythm disorder traces to bacterium lurking in gums: Study

Clinicians have observed a correlation between periodontitis, a common gum disease, and a higher likelihood of cardiovascular issues.

Researchers have identified DNA from harmful oral bacteria, including P. gingivalis, in heart muscle, valves, and arterial plaques, suggesting a link to various systemic diseases. ILLUSTRATION: ISTOCK

NEW research shows that the gum disease bacterium P. gingivalis can slip into the bloodstream and infiltrate the heart. There, it quietly drives scar tissue buildup — distorting the heart's architecture, disrupting electrical signals, and raising the risk of atrial fibrillation (AFib).

Clinicians have long noticed that people with periodontitis, a common form of gum disease, seem more prone to cardiovascular problems.

One recent meta-analysis has linked it to a 30 per cent higher risk of developing AFib, a potentially serious heart rhythm disorder that can lead to stroke, heart failure, and other life-threatening complications.

Globally, AFib cases nearly doubled in under a decade, rising from 33.5 million in 2010 to roughly 60 million by 2019. Now, scientific curiosity is mounting in how gum disease might be contributing to that surge.

Researchers have discovered DNA from harmful oral bacteria in heart muscle, valves, and even fatty arterial plaques.

Among them, P. gingivalis has drawn particular scrutiny for its suspected role in a growing list of systemic diseases, including Alzheimer's, diabetes, and certain cancers.

It has previously been detected in the brain, liver, and placenta. But how it manages to take hold in the heart has been unclear.

This study, published in Circulation, provides the first clear evidence that P. gingivalis in the gums can worm its way into the left atrium in both animal models and humans, pointing to a potential microbial pathway linking periodontitis to AFib.

“The causal relationship between periodontitis and atrial fibrillation is still unknown, but the spread of periodontal bacteria through the bloodstream may connect these conditions,” said study first author Shunsuke Miyauchi, assistant professor at HU's Graduate School of Biomedical and Health Sciences.

“Among various periodontal bacteria, P. gingivalis is highly pathogenic to periodontitis and some systemic diseases outside the oral cavity. In this study, we have addressed these two key questions: Does P. gingivalis translocate to the left atrium from the periodontitis lesion? And if so, does it induce the progression of atrial fibrosis and AFib?” added Miyauchi.

To simulate how P. gingivalis might escape the mouth and create problems elsewhere, researchers created a mouse model using the bacterium's aggressive W83 strain.

They divided 13-week-old male mice into two groups: one had the strain introduced into the tooth pulp, the other remained uninfected.

UNDER the supervision of the Illegal Trade Eradication Steering Committee, efforts to combat illicit trade continue effectively under the law.

On 9 and 11 May, combined teams seized illegal timber weighing 1.394 tonnes (worth K119,884) in Taungdwingyi Township, three unregistered vehicles (worth approximately K46 million) near the Yadana-bon Bridge combined checkpoint in Sagaing Township, and two unregistered vehicles (worth approximately K13 million) in Htantabin and Insein Townships. The action was taken under the Forest Law and the Export-Import Law.

Additionally, on 11 and 12 May, a combined on-duty team seized two trucks (estimated value of K70 million) carrying seven types of industrial materials valued at K124.5 million without official documents within the compound of the Yethaya temporary checkpoint. They also seized 2.609 tonnes of illegal teak, 0.936 tonne of illegal hardwood, and one tonne of other timbers (worth about K2.73 million) in Bago and Nyaunglebin Districts. An offender is seen alongside seized drugs and related items.

TASK force members from Drug Enforcement Division of the Myanmar Police Force seized quantities of stimulant tablets in separate incidents in Kalaw and Tachilek townships, according to the MPF.

Counter-argument to false information

False airstrike reports spread by malicious media

MALICIOUS media intentionally spread false information, claiming that the airstrike of security forces resulted in the death of 50 students, including two teachers, dead in Ohhteinkwin village in Dabayin Township, Sagaing Region.

According to the regional security officer, such news was invalid, and security forces conducted proper security measures to protect the lives and prosperity, and did not conduct an airstrike.

The government focuses on the promotion of the education quality of the new generation, and terrorists commit attacks and kidnappings.

Certain subversive media outlets disseminate false narratives to disrupt community peace and stability, aiming to conceal the collaborative efforts between security forces and residents in maintaining security.

Rare fan-holding Buddha statue discovered in TadaU pagoda repository

A rare Buddha statue holding a fan was found in the repository of a pagoda in TadaU Township, according to historian and writer Bo Shake (Yadanapura).

“It was found on 11 May when a pagoda in the Shwe Tha Lyaung compound in TadaU collapsed. Its body parts and disciples were only found today (12 May) after debris was cleared,” he said.

As the unique statue consists of two headdressed Brahma figures holding umbrellas, three Sakka statues with fly-whisks, and six monks worshipping, the meditators are not the usual first five disciples of Buddha.

“The strangest thing is the Buddha holding a fan. This type of statue is very rare. We tentatively guess that it is from the early Konbaung era, King Alaungpaya U Aung Zeya’s time, which was the transitional period,” he said.

With Brahma and Sakka together, the statue was believed to be cast for the peace and prosperity of the country, he added.

“In our history, the country was not stable at that time, with many rebellions. They invaded Inwa several times. These enemies were all suppressed after King Alaungpaya came to power. I wonder if this statue was cast and worshipped with the symbol for peace. And it appeared on the Vesak day. So, I believe it is a good omen that Myanmar will be peaceful,” he continued. — Htet Oo Maung/ZN

Russian entrepreneur finds her best era for entrepreneurship in China

IN her office located at the Tianjin Pilot Free Trade Zone, 36-year-old Russian entrepreneur Svetlana Olkhovikova, dressed in a cream-coloured suit, gently sipped a matcha latte while checking orders from her business partners in Russia and Uzbekistan.

Leveraging her excellent communication skills and experience in international trade, she has established two foreign trade companies in north China's port city of Tianjin.

In September 2023, she founded a company focusing on exporting agricultural machinery. In March 2024, she launched another one specializing in the cross-border trade of medical devices, equipment and accessories.

The two companies have already built partnerships with enterprises in over 20 countries and regions, including Russia, Kazakhstan and the Republic of Korea, said Olkhovikova in fluent Chinese.

"In China, I've found the best era for entrepreneurship," she remarked with deep emotion. From selecting a company location and registering her business to renewing her work visa and even arranging bank account setups, she was repeatedly impressed by the local government's combination of administrative efficiency and human-centred policies.

As a foreign entrepreneur in China, Olkhovikova faced challenges such as learning local laws and tax regulations. However, the "nanny-style" support from government agencies gave her a strong sense of reassurance.

"My grandfather used to say that the warmth of the Chinese people is like an ever-burning fire. Now that I'm building my career in Tianjin, I realize this isn't an exaggeration — it's truly the warmth I feel every day," she said.

Olkhovikova's decision to start her business in China was driven not only by its excellent business environment but also by its vast domestic market, highly efficient industrial and supply chains, and continuously improving innovation ecosystem.

"The Chinese market is enormous. Many products manufactured here are increasingly in demand overseas, offering countless opportunities for people around the globe," said Olkhovikova, who has gained a deeper understanding of China's economic development through her entrepreneurial journey. — Xinhua

Struggling Nissan to cut 10,000 more jobs: media

NISSAN plans to cut 10,000 more jobs worldwide, Japanese media reported on Monday, a day before the struggling car-maker was expected to report a record annual loss of around $5 billion.

Public broadcaster NHK said the decision, in addition to a November announcement that it would slash 9,000 positions, means Nissan is now aiming to reduce its total workforce by approximately 15 per cent.

Nissan, whose mooted merger with Honda collapsed earlier this year, declined to comment on the reports which also appeared in the Nikkei business daily.

The company — one of the top 10 automakers by unit sales — is heavily indebted and engaged in an expensive business restructuring plan.

Like many peers, Nissan is finding it difficult to compete against home-grown electric vehicle brands in China, while its profits are now under further threat from US trade tariffs.

The possible merger with Japanese rival Honda had been seen as a potential lifeline.

But talks crashed in February after Honda proposed making Nissan a subsidiary instead of integrating under a holding firm.

Then last month Nissan issued a stark profit warning, saying it expects an annual net loss of 700-750 billion yen ($4.8-$5.1 billion) for the 2024-25 financial year.

Its previous worst full-year net loss was 684 billion yen in 1999-2000, during a financial crisis that birthed its rocky partnership with French automaker Renault. — AFP

China, US announce measures to ease tariff tensions

CHINA and the United States announced here Monday a series of tariff modification measures aimed at easing trade tensions between the world's two largest economies.

The decision followed a two-day China-US high-level meeting on economic and trade affairs, where both sides recognized the importance of their bilateral economic and trade relationship to both countries and the global economy, a joint statement said, noting that both sides emphasized the need for a sustainable, long-term and mutually beneficial economic and trade relationship.

According to the statement, the United States will place a 90-day pause on 24 percentage points of the additional ad valorem rate of duty on articles of China (including articles of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region and the Macau Special Administrative Region) starting from 2 April, while retaining the remaining rate of 10 per cent on those articles. It will also remove the additional tariff rates on imports from China announced on 8 and 9 April respectively.

According to the Executive Order 14259 issued on 8 April by the White House, the United States raised "reciprocal" tariff rate on China to 84 per cent. One day later, the White House in another executive order hiked rate to 125 per cent.

Ad valorem tax is a tax based on the assessed value of assets, goods or services being taxed.

China will modify accordingly the application of the additional ad valorem rate of duty on articles of the United States set forth in Announcement of the Customs Tariff Commission of the State Council No 4 of 2025, by suspending 24 percentage points of that rate for an initial period of 90 days, while retaining the remaining additional ad valorem rate of 10 per cent on those articles.

It will remove the modified additional ad valorem rates of duty on those articles imposed by the No 5 and No 6 announcements issued by the Customs Tariff Commission of the State Council on 9 and 11 April respectively. — Xinhua

Japan rice prices fall for 1st time in 18 weeks amid govt measures

JAPAN'S rice prices fell for the first time in 18 weeks to 4,214 yen ($28.50) per five kilogrammes, the government said Monday, with the release of its stockpiles appearing to finally have an effect on stabilizing supply.

During the seven days through 4 May, the average price of rice sold at supermarkets across the nation fell by 19 yen per five kilogrammes from the previous week, when it hit its highest level since data collection began in March 2022, according to the Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries.

But with prices still sitting at around double from a year earlier, it remains to be seen whether the downward trend will continue.

The National Federation of Agricultural Cooperative Associations, which has received the bulk of the released stockpiles, has been moving to bring them to market. — Kyodo

Alcaraz, Zverev march into Italian Open last 16

CARLOS Alcaraz joined reigning Italian Open champion Alexander Zverev in the last 16 in Rome after seeing off Laslo Djere 7-6 (7/2), 6-2 on centre court on Sunday.

Four-time Grand Slam champion Alcaraz reached the fourth round at the Foro Italico for the first time after a battle with spirited Djere. In the next round, Alcaraz will face Karen Khachanov who knocked out Italian wild card entrant Francesco Passaro 6-3, 6-0. Alcaraz was playing in his second match since suffering a thigh injury in his Barcelona Open final defeat by Holger Rune last month.

And the Spaniard was not at his best against Djere whose three career tournament wins have all come on clay, his most recent title in March, at the Chile Open in Santiago. The 22-year-old was broken twice in the first set which looked like going either way until he took control in the eventual tie-break, before sweeping Djere aside in the second. "I just thought that I had to stay there mentally strong, waiting for my chances because I was playing great," said Alcaraz. "I was playing great, hitting the ball. It was just a few mistakes that I made." Zverev meanwhile barely broke a sweat against Lithuanian qualifier Vilius Gaubas, easing to a 6-4, 6-0 win to set up a last-16 clash with France's Arthur Fils. — AFP

Unexpected challenges for Klopp as Leipzig trapped in stormy waters

EVEN for a multitasker like Jurgen Klopp, juggling multiple responsibilities appears increasingly challenging.

Four months into his role as Red Bull's "Head of Global Soccer," the 57-year-old former Liverpool manager has found himself acting as an emergency responder for the energy drink giant's flagship club: RB Leipzig. The two-time German Cup winner is enduring an uncharacteristically difficult season. Klopp's broad portfolio leaves limited time to personally manage the range of football operations under the Red Bull umbrella. While he and former German international Mario Gomez were in attendance last weekend for FC Paris' promotion to Ligue 1, Leipzig was dealing with a growing crisis.

In March, Klopp's associate Zsolt Low left his role as Head of Soccer Development to replace Marco Rose as Leipzig's interim head coach. However, despite the shuffle, the team failed to qualify for the UEFA Champions League for the first time in years. A major overhaul appears inevitable. Alongside a search for a new coach, Leipzig must rebuild its squad. The pressure is mounting on Klopp, who is now under scrutiny from both fans and media. Rumours have circulated that Klopp might take over coaching duties himself, but his agent Marc Kosisic quickly dismissed the speculation. "He is happy with his job," Kosisic said. — Xinhua

Dortmund spoils Alonso's Leverkusen farewell to stay in Champions League hunt

BORUSSIA Dortmund spoiled Xabi Alonso's farewell at the BayArena with a clinical 4-2 comeback win over Bayer Leverkusen in the Bundesliga on Sunday, keeping themselves firmly in the race for a Champions League spot.

In Alonso's final home game as Leverkusen coach, the hosts dominated early on and took a deserved lead in 32 minutes through Jeremie Frimpong, who finished from close range after good work from Florian Wirtz.

But Dortmund hit back immediately. Julian Brandt, playing against his former club, equalized a minute later with the visitors' first real chance. Before the break, Julian Ryerson completed the turnaround with a low shot after Dortmund had won possession deep in Bayer territory. Despite continued pressure from Leverkusen, with Wirtz, Nathan Tella and Amine Adli all going close, BVB goalkeeper Gregor Kobel made a number of good saves to keep the visitors in front. The home side lacked the clinical edge that Dortmund displayed throughout.

Karim Adeyemi made it 3-1 in 73 minutes, racing past Jonathan Tah and finishing coolly. Four minutes later, Serhou Guirassy added a fourth, effectively ending the contest. Jonas Hofmann headed in a consolation in stoppage time, but the damage had already been done.—Xinhua

Champions League race still open as Newcastle beats Chelsea and Arsenal held

THE race to ensure the final Champions League places in the Premier League remains open after the 36th round of matches at the weekend.

Arsenal could have confirmed a top-five finish with a win away to Liverpool, but drew 2-2, although Mikel Arteta will be content after seeing his side fight back from 2-0 down after conceding quick-fire goals to Cody Gakpo and Luis Diaz midway through the first half.

Gabriel Martinelli pulled a goal back for Arsenal in 47 minutes, and Mikel Merino levelled with 20 minutes left to play, before being sent off for two yellow cards 11 minutes from time.

Four other teams still have top-five hopes with two games left to play.

Newcastle United beat Chelsea 2-0 at St James' Park to move up to third above Manchester City.

The home side got off to a flying start when Sandro Tonali popped up at the far post to open the scoring after just two minutes. Things got better for Newcastle when Chelsea were reduced to 10 men after 35 minutes, as striker Nicolas Jackson was dismissed for using his elbow on Sven Botman.

Chelsea reacted well with a player less, and Marc Cucurella and Enzo Fernandez both forced Newcastle goalkeeper Nick Pope into good saves, but the game was decided in the last minute when Bruno Guimaraes' shot took a deflection to loop into the net.

Nottingham Forest had the chance to move above Chelsea, but was held to a surprise 2-2 draw at home to already-relegated Leicester City. — Xinhua

Gaza faces 'critical risk of famine': UN report

GAZA is at "critical risk of famine", with 22 per cent of the population facing an imminent humanitarian "catastrophe" after more than two months of an aid blockade by Israel, a food security monitor warned Monday.

Gaza's entire population of around 2.4 million people is at risk of a food crisis "or worse" by September, the UN- and NGO-backed Integrated Food Security Phase Classification (IPC) said in a report.

"Nineteen months into the conflict, the Gaza Strip is still confronted with a critical risk of famine," the IPC said.

It said there had been a "major deterioration" in the food security situation since its last assessment in October 2024.

"Goods indispensable for people's survival are either depleted or expected to run out in the coming weeks. The entire population is facing high levels of acute food insecurity, with half a million people — one in five — facing starvation," it said.

The consortium, which has developed a five-level famine warning system, found that from 1 April to 10 May, 244,000 people in Gaza were in the most critical food security situation — level five, or "catastrophe/famine".

It classified another 925,000 as level four, or "emergency".

The UN's Food and Agriculture Organization warned that Gaza faced "imminent risk of famine", saying agriculture was "on the brink of total collapse".

It called for the "immediate" lifting of the blockade, saying aid like animal feed and veterinary supplies was urgently needed to maintain precious production of items such as milk and eggs, often the last remaining food.

Israel, which launched its Gaza offensive after the 7 October 2023 attacks led by Palestinian Islamist group Hamas, imposed its current aid blockade on 2 March.

Last week, the Israeli security cabinet approved plans to expand the military operation, including the "conquest" of Gaza and the displacement of its population. — AFP

Iran says latest nuclear talks "more serious", rejects US call to dismantle facilities

IRANIAN Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi said on Sunday that indirect negotiations with the United States in Oman to revive the 2015 nuclear deal had become "much more serious and frank," as President Masoud Pezeshkian rejected US demands for Tehran to dismantle its nuclear infrastructure.

The talks in Muscat, facilitated by Oman, mark the latest effort to salvage the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action. The United States unilaterally withdrew from the accord in 2018 under US President Donald Trump's first term, prompting Iran to reduce compliance with its nuclear commitments gradually.

Araghchi, speaking to Iran's state-run IRIB TV after the fourth round of negotiations in Oman's capital, said the discussions had shifted from general topics to more specific proposals. He characterized the talks as "forward-moving" but acknowledged the growing complexity of the issues. Both sides agreed to continue the discussions.

The latest round, lasting about three hours, follows previous sessions in Muscat on 12 and 26 April, and in Rome on 19 April. — Xinhua

SOUTH Korea on Monday kicked off an official campaign for the snap presidential election on 3 June, caused by the ouster of former conservative President Yoon Suk-yeol from office over his botched martial law bid last December.

Registering with the National Election Commission were seven candidates, including Lee Jaemyung of the majority liberal Democratic Party and Kim Moon-soo of the second-biggest conservative People Power Party.

Lee, who lost the 2022 presidential election to the ousted Yoon by the country's narrowest margin of 0.73 percentage points, launched his campaign at a square in central Seoul, where protesters had gathered to demand the removal of Yoon from office.

The human rights lawyer-turned-politician maintained his position as a presidential frontrunner in the 3 June election, taking a big lead over his conservative archrival.

Lee garnered a support rate of 54.0 per cent in a hypothetical three-way matchup with Kim and Lee Jun-seok of the minor conservative New Reform Party, according to local pollster Flower Research.

Kim won an approval score of 20.6 per cent, followed by the minor party candidate with 6.9 per cent.

The result was based on a poll of 2,002 voters conducted between Friday and Saturday. It had a plus and minus 2.2 percentage points in margin of error with a 95 per cent confidence level. — Xinhua
