Visitors flock to Bagan for Tazaungdine Festival despite bad weather

VISITORS flocked to the Bagan cultural zone during the Thadingyut open season and the Tazaungdine Festival. Hotels were booked in advance, and visitors thronged Bagan from 1 November until the full moon day of Tazaungmone. According to residents, if the weather is fine, the number of visitors will increase to the point where hotels, guesthouses, and monasteries are full.

“Even though it rained on the full moon day, visitors still flocked to Bagan. Hotels were packed with pre-booked tourists and pilgrims. If the weather had been good, there would have been even more travellers. The steady influx of visitors before the Tazaungmone full moon day made the pagodas crowded. It was heartening to see so many travellers continuously arriving in the Bagan cultural area. During the open tourism season, we invite everyone to visit the Bagan region, which is home to ancient cultural heritage, and to make merit,” said Daw San San Myint, Assistant Director of the Department of Hotels and Tourism (Bagan Branch).

In addition to domestic travellers, international tourists also visited the Bagan cultural zone. Many offered oil lamps at 18 famous pagodas and performed acts of merit on the full moon day of Tazaungmone.

“Today, there are many pilgrims. If it doesn't rain, there will be even more. Nearly 8,000 tourists visited Htilominlo Pagoda during the Tazaungdine holidays, and almost 10,000 people visited on the full moon day. This is more than last year. Bagan is a place where Myanmar's cultural heritage is concentrated, so seeing Bagan really makes one love our country and respect our religion.

That's why Bagan warmly welcomes all domestic and international visitors,” said U Tin Oo, Secretary of the Htilominlo Pagoda Trustees.

Recently, Myanmar has experienced heavy rain and strong winds due to a low-pressure area over the Bay of Bengal and a typhoon over the Philippine Sea, yet the Bagan region remained crowded with visitors performing good deeds during the religious festival. — Thitsa (MNA)/MKKS

Residents Urged to Prioritize Public Safety Amid Armed Terrorist Threats

ARMED terrorists have been launching attacks by using residential homes and administrative buildings in towns and villages as cover, where they have forcibly settled. They aim to shield themselves from Tatmadaw counterattacks while also persuading temporarily displaced persons to return to their native areas and recruiting new members. That enables terrorists to use civilians as human shields. Tatmadaw is committed to safeguarding the sovereignty of the State and will respond to these threats based on intelligence and prevailing conditions. Therefore, residents in areas where terrorists have taken control must prioritize their safety and protect themselves from being exploited by these groups.

General Aung San Declares Firm Stand Against Election Disruption

“Our Government shall not permit any disruption of the forthcoming election. The electoral process shall remain free and fair, and no interference shall be exercised upon those who participate in it. Yet, let it be firmly declared that any attempt to disturb or sabotage the election shall be met with the full weight of authority”.

(An excerpt from the radio address regarding the election, delivered by General Aung San on 13 March 1947)

Acting President of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar and Chairman of the State Security and Peace Commission Senior General Min Aung Hlaing and his wife Daw Kyu Kyu Hla watched the “Great Russia and Siberia” variety show performed by “Chaldony” State Song and Dance Ensemble of Novosibirsk, the Russian Federation, at the Myanmar International Convention Centre I (MICC I) in Nay Pyi Taw, yesterday afternoon.

The event began with the national anthems of both countries, followed by opening remarks by the Acting President and Chairman of the State Security and Peace Commission.

In his speech, the Senior General warmly welcomed the audience to the performance by the “Chaldony” State Song and Dance Ensemble from Novosibirsk, Russia.

The occasion was a meaningful and significant time for enhancing friendship and cultural cooperation between the Republic of the Union of Myanmar and the Russian Federation, which has already established more than 77 years of diplomatic relations based on mutual respect, understanding, and collaboration in various sectors, including culture, education, and arts.

He highlighted that the two countries have long maintained strong and lasting relations in multiple sectors, such as defence, education, science, technology, health, and culture, and the sector-wise cooperation between Myanmar and the Novosibirsk Region would continue to strengthen further.

Through the performance by the “Chaldony” State Song and Dance Ensemble, Myanmar audiences would not only appreciate the artistry and Siberian culture of the Novosibirsk Region but also reaffirm the deep and friendly ties between the peoples of both nations.

He noted that art reflects the culture and spirit of humankind, transcending all barriers to share beauty, harmony, and peace, uniting people through friendship. Therefore, the event was not merely a cultural exchange or entertainment event but also an opportunity to further strengthen the warm and friendly relations between Myanmar and Russia.

Novosibirsk Governor, Mr Andrey Travnikov, then expressed gratitude to the Senior General for inviting him to visit Myanmar, and giving special interest to culture and arts of Siberians. He continued that Myanmar’s religious and cultural heritage was profoundly rich and impressive, reflecting the sincerity and honesty of the Myanmar people. Although over a hundred ethnic groups live within the Russian Federation, they are all united by the same history and destiny.

He explained that the name “Chaldony” has deep historical significance, representing the ancient Siberians, Russians and the first pioneers and settlers of Siberia. The ensemble, he said, preserves the traditional customs, songs, and musical heritage of Siberia, and was honoured to perform in Myanmar to share Siberian culture, art, and joy with the Myanmar people.

The Senior General and his wife, and other attendees, enjoyed performances by artistes from the Novosibirsk Chaldony State Song and Dance Ensemble and artistes from the Department of Fine Arts under the Ministry of Religious Affairs and Culture.

The performances included classical and traditional Russian songs and dances based on rich folklore, performed with vibrant movements and musical artistry. The ensemble also presented a song titled “Bread is Everything”, by offering the Senior General and his wife the traditional Russian greeting of bread and salt, a symbol of friendship, gratitude, and hospitality.

Promote public awareness to reduce tsunami risks

THE United Nations Office for Disaster Risk Reduction (UN-DRR) launched the #GetToHighGround campaign in 2022 to promote awareness about reducing the risk of tsunamis. The campaign comprises the activities of citizens to participate in drills, runs, or walks along tsunami evacuation routes, which helps communities prepare for natural disasters and build their resilience. Thanks to these activities, raising public awareness helps reduce tsunami risk.

World Tsunami Awareness Day 2025 shines a spotlight on building resilient communities through the Tsunami Ready Programme – a global effort to turn awareness into action. This year’s campaign

Tsunamis are rare events but can be extremely deadly. In the past 100 years, 58 of them have claimed more than 260,000 lives, or an average of 4,600 per disaster, surpassing any other natural hazard. The highest number of deaths in that period was in the Indian Ocean tsunami of December 2004. Hence, not only the government but also relevant regional authorities have to emphasize public awareness of tsunamis and educate residents on how to manage themselves to escape from tsunamis and their impacts.

Nat Win The: The Subversion of Societal Stereotypes

The piece offers a critical analysis of a currently released film, highlighting its potential social impact and its merits as a worthwhile feature. I am informing the readership and contributing to the cultural commentary published through The Global New Light of Myanmar.

By Addams

A FILM’S greatest power lies not in its budget or entertainment value, but in its ability to inspire critical reflection within society. The horror genre rarely provides such a profound challenge, but ‘Nat Win The’ achieves this by highlighting the urgent need for critical thinking in Myanmar society – a crucial step toward cultivating a generation of logical thinkers and preventing the loss of valuable human resources. This film powerfully addresses gender bias by showcasing women’s strength, while simultaneously undermining deep-seated societal stereotypes about the supernatural.

The motion picture portrays the tragic consequences of intellectual immaturity, illustrating the urgent need for critical thinking in the community by showing the loss of an innocent person due to the collective, illogical decisions of the villagers. When there was a violent crime in their village, the innocent person was unjustly accused of being the criminal who killed a pregnant woman with psychological instability. The villagers found some blood on the long knife used by the innocent man and assumed his guilt. Based on this, the chairman decided to send him to the other side of the river, despite his and his friend’s objections. The chairman made this decision by blindly accepting the real criminal’s suggestions – an idea that other villagers also agreed with. On the way to the other side, a fight broke out on the boat, which carried the innocent man, his friend, and two of the three criminals. The conflict drowned the boat, and all occupants died. This film demonstrates itself as an educational tool for society, and pinpoints the importance of critical thinking in decision-making to foster the common good.

Furthermore, Nat Win The directly challenges the societal stereotype that the ability to speak with ghosts is a sign of evilness or ill fortune. This misconception is effectively dispelled by the main character’s assertion that communicating with supernatural beings should not be seen as a negative power. Instead, the film foregrounds that assisting these entities is a noble endeavour, thereby redefining ghosts not as terrifying figures but as beings deserving of empathy.

In addition, the film powerfully addresses gender bias by emphasizing the central woman’s work throughout the narrative. She is initially reluctant to accept her gift as a spirit medium, and this ability, coupled with her gender, leads to deliberate discrimination by the villagers. This ostracism is maintained even when she uses her nightmares to reveal crimes unknown to the community. Her final decision to accept her true nature empowers her to perform a noble work, facilitating the supernatural beings’ transition and highlighting a source of female strength that society initially rejected.

Ultimately, ‘Nat Win The’ was legendary for being an educational tool for society. It demonstrated women’s empowerment while simultaneously subverting deep-seated beliefs of society about extraordinary things. Therefore, it is obvious that producing such epic films hugely benefits society, decisively delivering metacognition to the targeted community.

I Say What I See: Equanimity – The Quiet Strength of Letting Go

In the final of the Four Sublime States, ဥပက္ခာ (Upekkhā) reveals itself not as indifference, but as the balance of mind that steadies compassion, joy, and kindness - tested most deeply in the struggles of real life.

By @Editor

IN the unfolding of the Four Sublime States (Brahmavihāra), the final and perhaps most elusive quality is ဥပက္ခာ (Upekkhā in Pali), often rendered in English as equanimity. The Oxford Dictionary of Buddhism describes it as “the emotionally detached state of one who witnesses without becoming emotionally involved”. At the same time, Webster’s Dictionary defines equanimity more broadly as “evenness of mind, especially under stress”. In Myanmar usage, U Tun Nyein’s English–Myanmar Dictionary conveys it as စိတ်ချမ်းသာခြင်း၊ စိတ်ညီညာခြင်း (တုန်လှုပ်မှုတင်မှုခြင်း၊ သွေးအေးမှုခြင်း) – a calm and balanced disposition – while U Hoke Sein’s Pali – English – Myanmar Dictionary explains ဥပက္ခာ as လွတ်လျူခြင်း (detached neutrality), a state of looking on without clinging or aversion.

Etymologically, Upekkhā arises from the Pali roots upa (“upon, over”) and ikkhati (“to see”), literally meaning “to look upon”. It is not indifference, but rather a poised balance of mind that allows one to remain steady amidst gain and loss, praise and blame, joy and sorrow. As the culmination of the Brahmavihāra – following Mettā (loving-kindness), Karuṇā (compassion), and Muditā (sympathetic joy) – Upekkhā completes the circle of sublime states, ensuring that love, compassion, and joy are held in wisdom’s steady embrace.

Yet Upekkhā is not confined to the pages of dictionaries or the halls of monasteries. It breathes within the social fabric of our daily lives. In a world marked by constant flux – political upheavals, economic uncertainties, shifting cultural values – the call for equanimity is not merely philosophical but profoundly practical. We see it in the quiet resilience of communities facing hardship, in the ability of individuals to remain steady amidst conflict, and in the calm discernment required to navigate the noise of public discourse.

In Myanmar society, the word ဥပက္ခာ often surfaces in conversations about fairness, patience, and the capacity to “look on” without bias. It is invoked when neighbours settle disputes without anger, when leaders are urged to act without favouritism, and when families strive to maintain harmony despite differences. In global contexts too, equanimity is increasingly recognized as a vital quality for mental health, conflict resolution, and ethical leadership.

Thus, Upekkhā is not an abstract detachment but a living principle, one that steadies the heart in turbulent times and allows compassion, kindness, and joy to flourish without being overwhelmed. It is here, in the real-world settings of human interaction, that the true depth of this sublime state is revealed.

Still, the meaning of ဥပက္ခာ (Upekkhā) cannot be fully grasped through definitions or social observations alone. Its essence is revealed most clearly in the lived moments where balance is tested, when emotions surge, when attachments pull, when judgments arise. In these spaces, equanimity is not an abstract virtue but a lived discipline, shaping how one responds to both harmony and discord. To understand how Upekkhā breathes within the fabric of ordinary life, I turn to my own encounters, where theory met reality and the practice of equanimity was called upon in unexpected ways.

Conflict: The Accusation

During my time as a leader of our organization, entrusted with the responsibility of assisting seafarers in need, I faced an unexpected storm, not from outside, but from within. A few colleagues, driven by their own motives, accused me of embezzlement. The irony was sharp: every expenditure had been carefully recorded and audited by a respected CPA firm in Bangkok. Yet the slander spread, and the weight of betrayal pressed heavily on me.

Inner Struggle: Anger and Hurt

At first, anger rose in me. How could those I worked alongside, those who knew my dedication, turn against me with such baseless claims? The instinct to defend myself, to fight back, was strong. But as the days passed, I found myself reflecting more deeply. Was my role to cling to position and pride, or to safeguard the mission we had built together for the seafarers and their families?

Resolution: Letting Go

In that reflection, something shifted. I chose not to retaliate. Instead, I forgave them and stepped aside, allowing them to carry the organization forward without me. It was not resignation, nor was it indifference. It was a conscious decision to place the well-being of the organization above my own ego. With or without me, I wished for its success. That was my genuine goodwill.

Reflection: The Spirit of Upekkhā

Looking back, I realize that what I practised, unknowingly, was a form of ဥပက္ခာ (Upekkhā), equanimity. It was not that I felt no pain; I did. It was not that I was indifferent; I cared deeply. But I chose balance over bitterness, forgiveness over retaliation. Even though the organization eventually fractured into three, I hold no regret for my decision. For in that moment, I learned that equanimity is not weakness, but the quiet strength to let go, to remain steady, and to keep goodwill alive even in the face of injustice.

In the end, the Four Sublime States – Mettā (loving-kindness), Karuṇā (compassion), Muditā (sympathetic joy), and Upekkhā (equanimity) – form not four separate virtues, but a single, interwoven fabric of the awakened heart. Loving-kindness opens us to others with warmth; compassion moves us to relieve their suffering; sympathetic joy allows us to celebrate their happiness.

Yet without equanimity, these qualities can falter; kindness may become attachment, compassion may sink into sorrow, joy may turn into envy.

It is Upekkhā that steadies them all, like the still axis around which the wheel of the Brahmavihāra turns. My own experience unexpectedly taught me this truth: when wronged, I could have clung to anger or pride, but instead I chose to let go, to forgive, and to wish well. That choice did not erase the sadness, nor prevent the eventual division of the organization, but it revealed to me the quiet strength of balance.

Thus, Upekkhā is not indifference, but the wisdom to remain steady in the face of life’s turbulence, to act with fairness and goodwill even when the heart is tested. It is the final jewel in the crown of the Brahmavihāra, completing the circle of sublime states and reminding us that true strength lies not in control, but in balance.

I say what I see: equanimity is not the absence of struggle, but the quiet strength to let go, to forgive, and to keep walking forward with balance.

China achieves thorium-uranium nuclear fuel conversion in molten-salt reactor

Molten-salt reactors, fourth-generation designs, use high-temperature molten salt as coolant, offering inherent safety, water-free cooling, atmospheric pressure operation, and high output – making them ideal for thorium utilization in nuclear energy.

CHINA has successfully achieved the first-ever thorium to Uranium nuclear fuel conversion in a Thorium Molten Salt Reactor (TMSR), and obtained valid experimental data following thorium fuel loading, confirming the technical feasibility of thorium utilization in a molten-salt reactor nuclear energy system, according to the Chinese Academy of Sciences’ Shanghai Institute of Applied Physics (SINAP) on Saturday.

The experimental TMSR, which was built by SINAP in collaboration with other Chinese institutions, is currently the only operational molten-salt reactor in the world loaded with thorium fuel. The realization of thorium-uranium conversion marks a milestone in TMSR development, providing core technical support and a feasible solution for China’s large-scale development and utilization of thorium resources, and for the future progress of advanced nuclear energy systems.

Molten-salt reactors are fourth-generation advanced nuclear energy systems that use high-temperature molten salt as a coolant. They boast inherent safety features, cool without water, run at atmospheric pressure, and deliver a high-temperature output. These features mean the reactors are widely recognized as the most suitable type for thorium resource utilization in nuclear energy production.

This technological route aligns particularly well with China’s abundant thorium reserves. It also allows for deep integration with industries such as solar power, wind power, high-temperature molten-salt energy storage, high-temperature hydrogen production, coal chemical engineering and petrochemical engineering, facilitating the construction of a complementary, low-carbon, integrated energy system. According to SINAP, the TMSR program was launched in 2011, achieving major progress from laboratory research to the engineering verification of core materials, equipment and technologies. With domestically developed core equipment and an independent supply chain, China has established complete TMSR technology and industrial chains in basic terms.

SINAP said that it will work with leading energy companies to consolidate the TMSR industrial and supply chains, and accelerate technology iteration and engineering application. The ultimate goal is to construct a 100-megawatt demonstration project and realize its demonstration application by 2035.

Kokang Democracy and Unity Party (KKDUP) talks about its policy, stance and work procedures

U Yan Kyin Kan, Chairman of the Kokang Democracy and Unity Party (KKDUP), presented the policy, stance and work procedures of his party on radio and television on the evening of 4 November.
The full text of the presentation is as follows: -

I extend my respectful greetings and best wishes to all our Union-born national brethren, and to all Myanmar citizens and working people across the nation, wishing everyone complete happiness, peace of mind, and good health.

I am Yan Kyin Kan, Chairman of the Kokang Democracy and Unity Party (KKDUP). I will present the policy, stance, and work procedures of our party to the entire Kokang ethnic people as well as all the national people.

Esteemed national brethren of the Union,

Our Kokang Democracy and Unity Party (KKDUP) was established in 1989 during Myanmar’s political reform period, in accordance with the Political Parties Registration Law, and rules, and regulations. The party was founded under the leadership and guidance of the prominent Kokang leaders, who carried on a long and distinguished historical tradition.

Accordingly, the party has re-registered as required by law, rules, and procedures in line with political necessities, and has continued its political journey. As a result, it is an ethnic political party that has gained considerable experience throughout its political endeavours.

In the 2015 multiparty democratic general election, our party contested in Lashio, Hsenwi, and Kunlong townships, and won seats in both the Pyithu Hluttaw from Kunlong Township and the Shan State Hluttaw. Thus, it has also gained appropriate parliamentary political experience.

To present the policies, stances, activities, objectives and visions of the Kokang Democracy and Unity Party (KKDUP), the Kokang ethnic people are a national group living in the hilly border regions. Although they are now residing across Myanmar, the majority still lag in education, social affairs, health, and economic development. While they are citizens of the Union and recognized as a national ethnic group, they still need to gain proper awareness of both their national duties and the ethnic rights they deserve.

The Kokang Democracy and Unity Party (KKDUP) was founded to represent the Kokang ethnic people, who still face many needs that must be addressed through political means, including gaining proper knowledge in education, health, social, and economic affairs, and fully enjoying the ethnic rights they deserve. The party emerged to enable the Kokang people to live together in equality and harmony with other ethnic groups.

Since the Kokang ethnic people live alongside all other Union-born national brethren, improving their social conditions, including education, health, and economic development, is essential. Only then can they participate in advancing a State based on democracy and a federal system, as envisioned by the government, without being marginalized. By standing and moving forward together with other ethnic communities, they can become valuable citizens contributing meaningfully to the nation.

In particular, within Myanmar’s changing political landscape, it is essential to have a genuine spirit of union and a correct, principled perspective and mindset as Union-born ethnic people.

Moreover, the party firmly upholds the policies and principles that aim to work together with all ethnic people to ensure non-disintegration of the Union, non-disintegration of national solidarity and perpetuation of sovereignty. It also seeks to help all ethnic communities build a new, peaceful, and secure social framework where everyone can live well. In this way, the Kokang ethnic people stand ready to represent their entire community and fulfil their historical responsibility.

Moreover, the party aspires to firmly advance politics based on fundamental principles that allow it to operate and progress without bias.

The above presentation sincerely outlines the policies, principles, activities, and aspirations of the Kokang Democracy and Unity Party (KKDUP).

May all Union-born Kokang ethnic people and all national brethren live in peace and serenity.

Taunggyi Tazaungdine Festival extends for next 3 days

THE current weather makes contested hot-air balloons unable to release, and due to this situation, the Taunggyi Tazaungdine Festival has been extended for next three days, according to sources.

The festival has initially planned from 29 October to 4 November, however it will now continue until 9 November.

The release of hot-air balloons was suspended for last three days due to the abnormal weather but some contested groups set off the Nyameegy balloon for the audience who didn’t go back and waited to see the event. “The fogs will make hindrance to see the balloon flying beautifully and the strong wind will make the balloon hard to fly. However, we released the balloon bearing losses because we feel sorry for visitors who came here from distant areas to enjoy this festival,” said an official from the well-known contested group, the southern hot-air balloon.

Releasing of daytime balloons started on 27 October as many balloons were registered for the festival but contested groups couldn’t make as

Nintendo lifts FY 2025 net profit outlook to 350B yen on Switch 2 sales

NINTENDO Co on Tuesday revised upward its net profit forecast for fiscal 2025 to 350 billion yen ($2.28 billion) from 300 billion yen on strong demand for its Switch 2 gaming console.

The revised outlook for the current business year ending March represents a 25.5 per cent rise from a year earlier. The company also said it aims to sell 19 million Switch 2 consoles, up from the previously forecast 15 million, and 48 million copies of game software for the new device, compared with a projection of 45 million units.

“(The Switch 2) is off to a very good start, even compared to our previous consoles,” President Shuntaro Furukawa said during an online press conference.

He attributed the success to global events that offered hands-on experiences and to the new model’s compatibility with games made for the older Switch.

Furukawa noted that the year-end shopping season — the first for the Switch 2 — will be crucial, adding that the company is prepared to expand production capacity in response to demand.

Nintendo has revised its operating profit estimate to 370 billion yen, up from its earlier projection of 320 billion yen. It expects sales to increase to 2.25 trillion yen, up from the previously estimated net profit to 198.94 billion yen. Operating profit grew 19.5 per cent to 145.18 billion yen, while sales more than doubled to 1.1 trillion yen from 523.3 billion yen a year earlier.

The company released the long-awaited Switch 2 in June, selling 10.36 million units through September, up from 4.72 million units of the previous model a year earlier.

Nintendo sold 20.62 million copies of game software in the same period for the new console, boosted by the popularity of titles such as “Mario Kart World”, which was released in June, and “Donkey Kong Bananza”, which went on sale in July. — Kyodo

Thailand’s business sentiment improves in Oct

THAILAND’S business sentiment improved for a third straight month in October, driven by the non-manufacturing sector due to the tourism high season and government stimulus measures, data from the central bank showed on Monday.

The business sentiment index (BSI) was recorded at 48.7 last month, up from 48.0 in September, marking the highest level since March.

The non-manufacturing index grew, especially in the hotel and restaurant and the passenger transport sectors, fuelled by long-haul tourist arrivals, the central bank said in a statement.

Three Spanish clubs face Champions League tests on the road

THREE Spanish clubs are on the road for Wednesday’s Champions League matches, with FC Barcelona traveling to Belgium to face Club Brugge, Athletic Club Bilbao visiting the site of a legendary comeback and Villarreal eyeing a strong opportunity for an away win in Cyprus.

Barcelona coach Hansi Flick will have Dani Olmo and Robert Lewandowski fit for the match against Club Brugge. However, midfielder Pedri and forward Raphinha are unavailable for the trip. Lamine Yamal, who is managing a pelvic injury, could start on the bench. If he does, Lewandowski would lead the attack with Ferran Torres on the right.

Athletic Club Bilbao travels to play Newcastle United, a fixture that evokes memories of a famous UEFA Cup clash from the 1994-95 season. In that second-round tie, Athletic overturned a 3-0 deficit against a Newcastle side that was then leading the Premier League. The Spanish club fought back to 3-2 in England before advancing on away goals after a 1-0 win in Bilbao.

Athletic arrives in poor form after consecutive defeats in La Liga. With key players such as Nico Williams not fully fit, the Basque side will need to be at its best to contain Newcastle’s attacking talents, including Anthony Gordon, Nick Woltemade and midfielder Bruno Guimaraes.

Newcastle lost to West Ham United at the weekend, but a great atmosphere is expected at a packed Saint James’ Park on Wednesday.

Villarreal has yet to find its footing in this Champions League campaign, but coach Marcelino Garcia Toral’s side has a prime chance for its first win when it travels to face Pafos FC, which is currently second in the Cypriot league. — Xinhua

Football star David Beckham hails knighthood as ‘proudest moment’

FORMER England football captain David Beckham on Tuesday received his knighthood from King Charles III at Windsor Castle, calling it his “proudest moment”.

The football star, 50, who played 115 times for England as well as for some of the world’s most high-profile clubs including Manchester United and Real Madrid, was knighted for services to sport and charity.

Beckham said it was “quite a moment” for a boy from the east end of London to be “here at Windsor Castle, being honoured by His Majesty the King — the most important and the most respected institution in the world”.

“This is without doubt my proudest moment,” he told the PA news agency.

fashion designer wife Victoria. She accompanied him to the ceremony at Windsor, west of London, along with his parents Ted and Sandra.

Beckham has been known as “Sir David” since the honour was announced in June while Victoria, a former member of the Spice Girls, became “Lady Beckham”.

Asked whether he managed to speak to Charles during the ceremony, Beckham said Charles had been “quite impressed with my suit”. — AFP

Khaka lifts Sunderland into fourth after Everton draw

SUNDERLAND climbed into the Premier League’s top four after Granit Khaka’s deflected strike salvaged a 1-1 draw at home to Everton on Monday.

The Black Cats would have moved up to second with victory, but were outplayed in the first half and trailed to Iliman Ndiaye’s brilliant individual effort.

Everton were left to regret not making more of their first half dominance as Thierno Barry missed a glorious chance and Jack Grealish hit the post.

Sunderland took less than a minute of the second period to hit back when Khaka’s strike flicked off James Tarkowski to beat England goalkeeper Jordan Pickford on his return to the Stadium of Light.

The home side then looked the more likely to claim all three points but Wilson Isidor fluffed Sunderland’s best chance to snatch victory.

“The first 25 minutes was not good enough,” Khaka told Sky Sports. “At this level, you get punished but the second half was very good.”

A point at least maintains Sunderland’s unbeaten home record and their impressive start to a first top flight campaign in eight seasons.

Everton edge five points clear of the bottom three in 14th, but the Toffees glaring lack of a prolific number nine again cost them victory.

“For 20 to 30 minutes I thought I’d be disappointed going home with a point. By the end of the game, I was pleased we got a point from it,” said Everton boss David Moyes.

“We missed a big chance to make it 2-0 and because we don’t get that it gave Sunderland a bit of confidence and gave the crowd something to get behind.”

A moment of magic gave the visitors the lead on 15 minutes as Ndiaye danced his way through four Sunderland defenders before firing into the top corner for his fourth goal of the season.

Grealish then hit the post from long range but it is Barry’s miss that will live long in the memories of the travelling support heading back to Merseyside. — AFP

Fiorentina sack Pioli after winless start in Serie A

SERIE A strugglers Fiorentina dismissed coach Stefano Pioli on Tuesday with the club bottom of the table after a 10-match winless run to start the season.

Fiorentina are off to their worst top-flight start in club history, picking up just four points so far after finishing sixth last season.

Pioli, 60, returned to Fiorentina for a second spell in July after less than a year in charge of Saudi side Al-Nassr. Before that he spent five years at AC Milan but left at the end of the 2023-24 season.

He becomes the third coach in Serie A to lose his job this term. Juventus moved on from Igor Tudor last week while Genoa parted ways with Patrick Vieira. Fiorentina named Daniele Galloppa as his replacement on a temporary basis but are reportedly considering Roberto D’Aversa, who has coached Parma, Lecce and Empoli, and former Torino boss Paolo Vanoli as the successor to Pioli. — AFP

Xi urges enhanced cooperation, better synergy of development strategies with Russia

CHINESE President Xi Jinping met Russian Prime Minister Mikhail Mishustin on Tuesday in Beijing, calling for enhanced cooperation on multiple fronts and better synergy of the two countries' development strategies.

Xi said that since the beginning of this year, China and Russia have steadfastly navigated a turbulent external environment with great composure, aiming for higher-level and higher-quality development goals. He added that maintaining, consolidating and advancing bilateral relations is a strategic choice for both sides.

Noting that new blueprints for bilateral ties were charted during his meetings with Russian President Vladimir Putin this year, Xi said the two countries should maintain close coordination, fully implement the important common understandings reached by the two leaders, and work to expand the pie of cooperation with an eye on the fundamental interests of the two countries and their peoples, so as to contribute more to world peace and development.

Xi urged efforts to steadily expand mutual investment and enhance cooperation in traditional fields such as energy, connectivity, agriculture and aerospace, tap into cooperation potential in new sectors such as artificial intelligence, digital economy and green development to foster new growth drivers for bilateral cooperation, and facilitate closer people-to-people exchanges.

He noted that the Recommendations of the Communist Party of China (CPC) Central Committee for Formulating the 15th Five-Year Plan for Economic and Social Development, adopted at the fourth plenary session of the 20th CPC Central Committee, have made top-level design and outlined the strategic blueprint for China's economic and social development in the next five years. — Xinhua

EU in last-ditch push to seal climate targets before COP30

EU environment ministers Tuesday launched a last-ditch bid to reassert the bloc's climate ambitions by nailing down key emissions targets in the run-up to the UN's COP30 summit in Brazil.

The European Union's member states have been haggling for months over two separate targets for slashing greenhouse-gas emissions: one for 2035 they must bring to the UN climate talks, and the other for 2040.

"This is a crucial day," French Environment Minister Monique Barbut told reporters as the final negotiations began in Brussels — warning that turning up empty-handed at the 10-20 November talks in Belem would spell "disaster" for the EU.

Behind only China, the United States and India in terms of emissions, the EU has been the most committed of the major polluters to climate action and has already cut emissions by 37 per cent compared to 1990.

But after blazing a trail, the EU's political landscape has shifted right, and climate concerns have taken a back seat to defence and competitiveness — amid concerns in some capitals that greening Europe's economy is harming growth.

"It takes 27 to tango," summed up the bloc's environment chief Wopke Hoekstra as he headed into Tuesday's talks.

The most urgent challenge for ministers is to reach a unanimous deal on an EU emissions target for 2035, known as a Nationally Determined Contribution (NDC), which Paris Agreement signatories are supposed to bring to the COP30. — AFP

Food parcels delivered to one mln Gazans since ceasefire: UN

THE United Nations said Tuesday it had distributed food parcels to one million people in Gaza since the ceasefire, but warned it was still in a race to save lives.

The UN's World Food Programme stressed all crossing points into the Gaza Strip should be opened to flood the famine-hit Palestinian territory with aid, adding that no reason was given why the northern crossings with Israel remained closed.

"Three and a half weeks into the ceasefire in Gaza, we have distributed food parcels to around one million people across the Gaza Strip," said the WFP's Middle East spokeswoman Abeer Etefa.

"That's part of the broad operation to push back hunger in Gaza," she told reporters in Geneva, speaking from Cairo.

WFP aims to reach 1.6 million people in the territory with parcels, which provide enough food for a family for 10 days.

However, to get operations running at the level required, "we really need more access, more border crossings to be opened and more access to key roads inside Gaza," said Etefa.

The US-brokered ceasefire between Israel and Hamas came into effect on 10 October.

Etefa described how the WFP was scaling up operations in Gaza and opened 44 of the 145 food distribution points it hopes to run.

An estimated 700,000 people are now receiving fresh bread daily, supplied through 17 WFP-supported bakeries: nine in south and central Gaza, and eight in the north. The agency is hoping to get 25 up and running.

Etefa said while food consumption levels had increased slightly thanks to the humanitarian aid and commercial trucks now allowed to enter, they remained well below pre-conflict levels. — AFP
